WILDERNESS SCHOOL

HYDE WILDERNESS

SCHOOL is a character-centered program that helps new and current students, as well as families, face challenges, see them through, and grow as individuals, while enjoying a unique wilderness experience in a gorgeous outdoor setting. Wilderness courses are based on high learning standards, and a belief that students and families can develop a contagious enthusiasm for life by sharing in challenging and supportive experiences.

Bigelow Mountains and Flagstaff Lake. Here participants engage in exciting outdoor activities, such as whitewater rafting, hiking, and rock climbing. From the BWP shores of Flagstaff Lake, students and families can canoe and kayak, venture out over the ice on snowshoes during winter expeditions, hike the Appalachian Trail, go fly-fishing, study natural history, and learn to combine the challenge of an active day with meaningful reflection.

courses take place on the Black Wilderness Preserve (BWP), the school's 620-acre campus in Eustis, Maine, overlooking the dramatic

HYDE WILDERNESS

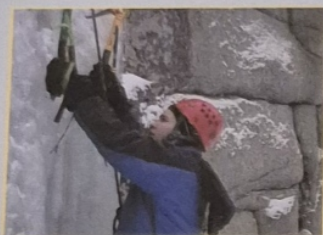

SCHOOL takes students and families out of their "comfort zones," challenges them beyond their own perceived limits, and helps draw out character and leadership qualities that are essential in building genuine self-confidence.

THE LEADER IN FAMILY-BASED CHARACTER EDUCATION

STUDENT & FAMILY COURSES

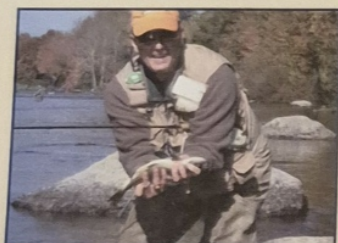

OUTPOST—Outpost is a service provided to the Hyde boarding school students. Outpost students are challenged in an outdoor setting to face unproductive attitudes and reconnect to a sense of personal excellence.

ADVENTURE TRIPS—

Adventure trips are offered throughout the year to students who have maintained high standards in their learning and who strive for earning leadership status in the community.

SPORTSMAN'S WEEKENDS—

Weekend getaways provide an opportunity to experience the natural beauty and splendor of the Maine outdoors. Each outing features rustic lakeside accommodations, and homemade meals, such as lobster chowder and strawberry-rhubarb pie. A weekend of fun, camaraderie, and great outdoor activity.

WILDERNESS FAMILY LEARNING CENTER (WFLC)—

The WFLC is a four-day experiential wilderness course that combines active outdoor challenges, such as hiking, canoeing, and rock climbing, with reflective exercises. During each trip, students and their families travel with skilled wilderness facilitators and learn, with other families, the value of pushing perceived limits and personal risk-taking.

NEW STUDENT ORIENTATION—

Character development is the focus of New Student Orientation. Students matriculating to one of the Hyde boarding campuses will learn the value of attitude and effort over aptitude and ability—academics, sports, performing arts, and community service are areas of Orientation's focus. Students will gain a clear idea of the responsibilities and expectations of being a member of the Hyde community.

ACADEMIC ONWARD—

Academic Onward is a course designed to help students make up work necessary to improve failing or near failing courses. Academic Onward helps students to utilize and understand valuable learning strategies by challenging unproductive learning attitudes, such as procrastination and poor time management.

CAMP BIGELOW—

This program is designed to give middle school girls personal attention with an emphasis on self-growth and community living. Our two-week camp experience draws out confidence while building upon physical skills through a variety of hands-on outdoor activities. Camp Bigelow fosters deep relationships among participants and with the natural environment through individual and group experiences. Camp Bigelow will run its first session for boys in summer 2005.

EARLY ENROLLMENT COURSE—

Hyde School's Early Enrollment Course gives families an opportunity to begin their Hyde education during times of the year when regular orientation programs for one of Hyde's boarding campuses are not offered. This course emphasizes Hyde's character-based curriculum in a way that helps acquaint students with the philosophy, schedule, rigor, and standards of Hyde. For students who have struggled with patterns of success, this course offers a high-quality opportunity to develop the foundation necessary to succeed in Hyde's rigorous character curriculum.
