Hyde School Names Legg Headmaster

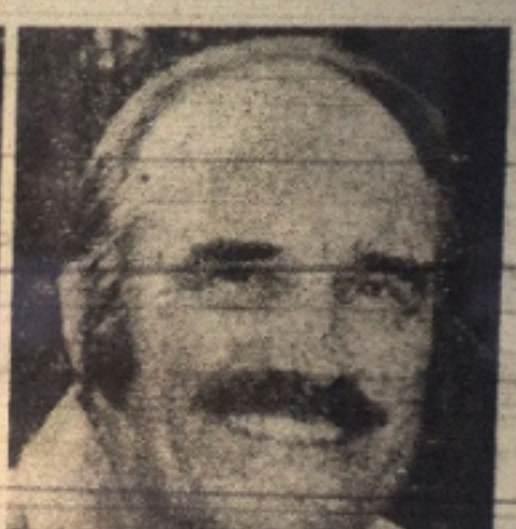

BATH — A man who is no stranger to the Hyde School educational philosophy, its students and faculty has been named headmaster.

Edward P. Legg, 33, will assume the position held by Joseph W. Gauld since the school was founded in 1966.

Gauld will concentrate on writing a book about the school's educational philosophy that character building outweighs the conventional grading system used in most educational institutions.

Edward Legg

Joseph Gauld

Legg joined the Hyde faculty in 1968. Since then he has headed almost every major department at the private secondary school on High Street.

"I have trained for this particular position for the past two years as assistant headmaster. Now I will be making most of the decisions myself," Legg said.

Legg said he couldn't be headmaster for any other school because of the unique philosophy he is helping to promote at Hyde.

The next few years of his life, Legg said, will be dedicated to Hyde. After that he will assist in the promotion of national change in the public education system to a more positive approach to character building, he added.

Legg envisions Hyde School as being the national model in the fight to change educational philosophies. "We are promoting a system of education which has attracted national television network interest. We want to show more people how it can be done," Legg added.

He was a 1965 graduate of Harvard University. He also earned a law degree from the University of Texas. He is married and has two children.

"We are trying to create an educational system that respects the educational capacity of each boy and girl. We believe Hyde is the national model for character education," he said.

guments

nts Suit

the acts of others.

These medical practitioners had nothing to do with the legal quesions surrounding Foster's custody and transportation to the hospital, defense attorneys claimed.

SKINNER COMMENTED occasionally throughout the hearing that there appeared to be enough differences in legal in-

HYDE SCHOOL. BATH.

Edward P. Legg named headmaster of the Hyde School in Bath. Joseph Gauld, former headmaster, will devote his time to writing.

Portland Press Herald.
October 21, 1975. P. 12