Provo Canyon School

Provo Canyon School is a residential treatment facility for students with mental health challenges.

Provo Canyon School is known for offering comprehensive mental health challenges, structured, therapeutic programs.

Provo Canyon School is a psychiatric Residential treatment facility.

Provo Canyon School is a safe, dedicated environment for students with mental health challenges. It provides a structured, therapeutic environment.

There are two Provo boarding school campuses: one in Springville, Utah, and the other in Provo, Utah.

- Middle School Program: Serving boys ages 12 to 14
- High School Programs: Serving youth ages 12 to 18 who are facing complicated mental health and behavioral health challenges.

Provo Canyon School is in-network with TRICARE, accepts funding from multiple state Medicaid systems, and frequently has student placements funded directly by their local public school districts. As a Non-Public Special Education School, on-site licensed academic provider with state-certified teachers capable of fulfilling Individualized Education Programs (IEPs) and credit recovery, with over 100 semester course offerings for those students who are enrolled and have fallen behind because of their mental health diagnosis.

Providing a higher level of care than a wilderness therapy program or therapeutic boarding school, Provo Canyon School is explicitly not a boot camp. Instead, clinicians and staff focus on building relationships with clients to maintain a positive, non-punitive environment.
