A school for troubled teens in the north Georgia mountains has closed its doors, just weeks after the I-Team reported multiple state violations on campus. Still, many former teachers and students tell reporter Randy Travis that Ridge Creek School started out as a force for good.

Ridge Creek School originally opened in 1994 under the name Hidden Lake Academy. Despite closing amid reports of massive debts, student arrests and a campus-wide riot, some former employees insist it's a school that should have been saved.
