At Red Rock Canyon School we understand that adolescence can be a period of turmoil and pain. Our mission is to provide the structure, unconditional acceptance, teaching, and security that must be present to ensure that quality treatment can occur. In this environment troubled teens can find the courage necessary to make positive changes in their lives and to have a future that is full of hope and promise. We help teens to identify and build upon their individual strengths to provide them with hope for the future, an opportunity for healing, and the catalyst for family unity.

Red Rock Canyon School is a state-licensed treatment facility for adolescents ages 12 to 17 with behavioral and/or emotional problems who require a level of structure and treatment beyond that which is available in traditional outpatient clinics but who do not require inpatient psychiatric care.

There are three levels of care at Red Rock Canyon School: "Residential," where students are under constant supervision as they learn and demonstrate cooperation and responsibility; "Transitional," during which students gain life skills and vocational training and take a more active and responsible role in their own treatment planning; and "Independent Living," where older students continue to learn and apply life skills to prepare to take care of themselves following discharge. We provide opportunities through our therapy, academic, and residential living programs for youth to gain a greater understanding about themselves and knowledge about the world around them. Our interactive student living program offers a highly structured and supportive environment designed to foster acceptance and support in which the students can practice their newly acquired social skills. Participation in our enrichment, recreational, and vocational training programs further complements their preparation for life challenges and their overall sense of happiness and well-being.
