Success Stories - A Parent Note to Steve Sawyer: The parent of a client who graduated from New Vision Wilderness recently wrote a letter to Steve directly to thank him for everything he has done. "What New Vision and you, specifically, did for H. was amazing. Not only did you arrest his bad behaviors but you opened his mind and heart to a whole new future. Cherokee Creek made a point of telling us that none of their students had ever come out of the wilderness in such a strong and stable condition as our son did. He was open to his new therapist and made a fairly easy transition to the new environment. Most importantly, he had become self-aware and less impulse-driven." 855-689-8326

Heroin Use On The Rise Again: The new face of heroin bears little resemblance to the former stereotyped image of gaunt, pale and dirty "street" people. The recent death of clean cut Glee star Cory Monteith from an apparent overdose of heroin and alcohol sadly may benefit the public by bringing attention to the new generation of heroin users. Hopefully Monteith's celebrity status will not mislead parents into believing that heroin is a Hollywood problem. Its use is a problem with kids, teens, blue and white-collar workers from all races and cultures. For more information, contact Selina Mason Public Relations at 866-906-8336.

Fulshear Ranch Academy Welcomes Higgins To Admissions: Fulshear Ranch Academy, a treatment and transition program for young women is pleased to welcome Shannon Higgins to the admissions team.
